Start-ups jostle to tap India's $180-billion education sector as Covid–19 forces learning to go online

PEERZADA ABRAR Bengaluru, 17 August

he Indian Premier League's (IPL) 2020 edition is the most highly anticipated cricketing event compared to the previous seasons due to the disruption caused by the Covid-19 pandemic. Big companies such as Tata Sons and Reliance Jio are eyeing the title sponsorship of IPL, which would be held in the United Arab Emirates, to replace Chinese mobile phone company Vivo this season. Interestingly, education technology start-ups Unacademy and Byju's, which compete with each other, have also reportedly joined the fray. This reflects the new levels of ambitions by Indian edtech companies as much of the country's $180-billion education sector goes online to adapt to the new reality.

The pandemic has been a watershed moment for India's edtech sector. Since March, Unacademy has doubled the number of active subscribers. The monthly watch time has reached an all-time high of over 1 billion minutes.

Unacademy has opened up the platform to schools and colleges to conduct live classes without any interruptions. The Bengaluru-based start-up was founded by Gauray Munial, Roman Saini, and Hemesh Singh in 2015, initially on YouTube in 2010. It now has a network of more than 18,000 educators and 30 million learners. It expects to earn an annual recurring revenue (ARR) of about $300 million in the coming years.

According to industry insiders, big tech companies including Facebook, Google and Microsoft are eyeing investments in these start-ups.

Social media giant Facebook has already placed its bet on Unacademy. It participated in a $110-million investment round in February. The round, which was led by General Atlantic, also drew funding from Sequoia India, Nexus Venture Partners, Steadview Capital and Blume Ventures. Flipkart's CEO Kalyan Krishnamurthy and Udaan co-founder Sujeet Kumar also participated in the round, which according to sources, gave the company a post-money valuation of $510 million. Unacademy is now in talks with Japan's SoftBank and other investors to raise $200 million, valuing the company at $1.2 billion.

"This (online education) is an expansive space and not a winner-takes-all category," said Ankur Pahwa, partner and national leader, e-commerce and consumer internet at EY India. "There are many startups focusing on various challenges that the segment faces, from provid-Progress ing content in local languages upskilling teachers and edureport cation in new technologies.' educational games, for $120 million to propel its global ambitions. The pandemic has helped Byju's become a decacorn and cross $10.5 billion in valuation after raising new funding from Silicon Valley investor Mary Meeker's Bond Capital. Byju's has now joined the league of 24 decacorns such as TikTok-owner

Bytedance and Elon Musk's SpaceX. Since the lockdown, Byju's has seen over 15 million new students joining its platform. Last month, the company launched Byju's classes, a comprehensive online tutoring programme for personalised after-school learning solutions from India's top teachers. Byju's learning app has over 64 million registered students and 4.2 million annual paid subscriptions. Byju's said it is now inching towards the $1billion revenue milestone.

Pahwa of EY said there is a groundswell of support for online education fuelled by penetration into "Bharat" (small towns and rural India). "Edtech companies are more agile and can adapt to the fast-changing environment," he pointed out.

One such fast-growing company is Vedantu, which provides live tutoring with some of the best-curated teachers. In July, it raised $100 million from US-based investment firm Coatue with participation from existing investors. With this round, the Bengaluru-based firm's valuation jumped to $600 million, making it the second most-valued company in Indian edtech.

Vedantu grew 220 per cent during the lockdown, with more than two million students attending live classes. With this definitive shift in consumer behaviour, Vedantu is investing to scale impact and get into new categories. Over one million students study live every month on the Vedantu platform. Also, more than 25 million users every month from over 1,000 cities and 40 countries access free content, tests and videos on Vedantu's platform and its YouTube channels.

Coursera, the Mountain View, California-based online learning company, is also witnessing a huge demand in the country. Since March, it has added over 3.6 million learners in India compared to 1.4 million in all of 2019.

As of the end of July, there were nine million registered learners from India on Coursera. It has attracted over 50 entercustomers prise including Tata Communications and Airtel. This month, Indian Institute of Technology (IIT) Roorkee partnered with Coursera to launch two new certificate programmes - in artificial intelligence and machine learning, and in data science — as part of the institute's commitment to making its programmes accessible to learners globally.

NEWSMAKER/ KAUSHIK KHONA / GOAIR CEO

Turnaround expert back in the cockpit

ANEESH PHADNIS

When Kaushik Khona took over as the chief executive officer of GoAir in summer of 2009, the airline had barely six aircraft and limited operations. A few months earlier, GoAir had introduced a business class product (the first for an Indian no-frills airline) and attractive fares to lure flyers. But customer confidence remained low owing to the high rate of flight cancellations. Khona, who had been a vice president in the Wadia group before this appointment, steadied the ship, improved the aircraft utilisation and expanded the airline's network with a focus on mini metros and tier II cities. When he left the airline in 2011, it was in much better shape, having clocked 61 and 7 per cent growth in revenue and net profit, respectively, in FY'11.

Khona's abilities will be put to test again as he begins a second innings at the Wadia group airline. The airline press release on Friday described him as a turnaround specialist and a qualified resolution professional. In the past 12 years, Khona turned around the operations of Dunlop Tyres and restructured a renewable energy and shipping venture before taking up a consulting role in Talati & Talati LLP, the airline said.

Khona's second innings at GoAir will be more challenging than the first. Globally, the aviation industry is in deep distress because of the pandemic. Domestic air traffic is down 82 per cent on a year-on-year basis and the industrywide load factor is 50-55 per cent. GoAir's load factor fell to 50.5 per cent in July from 57.9 per cent in June. Most other airlines operated cargo-only flights during April-May to support revenue but GoAir failed to capitalise on the opportunity. The airline relied on a third party for cargo handling and was developing its own in-house capabilities when the pandemic struck. Against an industry-wide capacity deployment of around 30 per cent of pre-Covid period, GoAir is operating only at 10-12 per cent capacity. The airline operates around 40 flights daily including charters.

Khona's challenge would be to shore up the airline's finances. Cash and bank balance had halved to ₹72.5 crore sequentially in the June-end quarter and its credit rating downgraded in July, given the weak liquidity outlook. He will also have to negotiate with Airbus regarding scheduled aircraft deliveries given the changed business outlook. Last October, the airline had indicated it would induct one aircraft a month. It has a fleet of 55 aircraft at present.

Motivating the workforce will also be essential since the airline has put around 70 per cent of its staff on leave without tion consultancy CAPA, in a statement.

pay since March. Several senior executives, too, have quit in recent weeks. "Other airlines have cut salaries and jobs but have managed public perception better," said an industry expert.

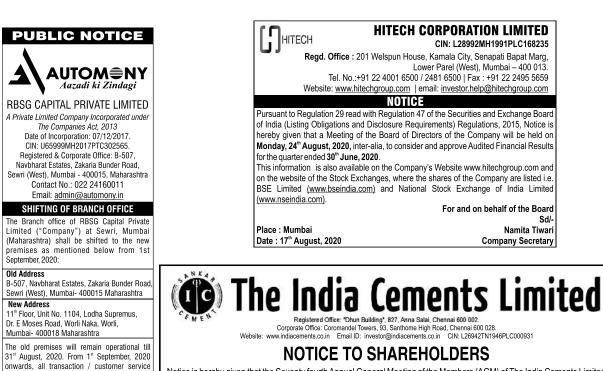

"GoAir has taken a spreadsheet-driven hard-line approach to save cash. With no bailout or support coming from the government, the promoters probably believe that is the only way to save the airline," the industry expert pointed out. This also explains why the airline is operating fewer flights than others. Insiders say it is not prudent to add flights if the airline is unable to make money from them. The June-September period is also traditionally a weak quarter for domestic aviation and executives are hoping for a demand recovery from next month.

Some believe that cash conservation alone will not help and the airline will have to focus on operational efficiencies. During his earlier tenure, GoAir's average fleet utilisation had increased to over 14 hours a day, among the highest in the industry, and this helped it achieve economies of scale.

"Kaushik taking over GoAir is possibly the most agile and aggressive step the Wadias could have taken; more so since Kaushik, unlike anyone else before in the CEO role, knows the management and functioning DNA of the Wadia group extremely well," said Mark D Martin, founder & CEO of Martin Consulting LLC, an aviation consulting and safety firm.

His approach with GoAir centres on his powerful understanding of airline financials, P&L and revenue and returns, and this has worked extremely well for GoAir in the past, he added.

Others believe a mere change in guard will not help GoAir ride the storm. "Kaushik's first tenure as GoAir's CEO was good and we wish him good luck for the second tenure. His induction this time is under severe and challenging circumstances - most of which are beyond his control, especially recapitalisation," said Kapil Kaul, South Asia CEO of aviasimilar proportions.

Salaried jobs in urban India are likely to be the better paying jobs; they offer better terms of engagement and also are jobs that yield higher productivity compared to salaried jobs in rural India. Loss of these urban salaried jobs is, therefore, likely to have a particularly debilitating impact on the economy, besides causing immediate hardship to middleclass households.

Financial statements of listed companies for the quarter ended June S alaried jobs have taken the biggest sustained hit in the current Covid-19-induced lockdown. 2020 provide a few insights into salaried jobs. Listed companies provide among the better salaried jobs.

Financial statements for the quarter ended June 2020 of 1,560 companies were available in

The wage bill of these 1,560 listed companies recorded a 2.9 per cent yoy increase in the June 2020 quarter. This is the lowest growth in the past 18 years.

declined by a whopping 22 per cent What is revealing in this data is the stark differences between industries. Urban India has more salaried jobs A caveat before we discuss these is that than rural India. Of the 86 million these are still preliminary results and a salaried jobs in India in 2019-20, 58 per better picture will emerge only after a cent were in urban India and 42 per month. Nevertheless, these results cent in rural India. Job losses are also in indicate a pattern that is worth noting The writer is MD and CEO, CMIE PLtd even with these preliminary data.

Banks saw a 16.6 per cent increase in their wage bill and securities broking companies saw a 13.5 per cent increase in theirs but manufacturing companies saw a 7 per cent fall in their wage bill. The services sector was a mixed bag.

Within manufacturing, textiles has seen the biggest hit. Its wage bill fell by 29 per cent. Textiles is a labour-intensive industry and this sharp fall in the wage bill implies a very sharp fall in employment in the industry. The same holds true for leather, another labourintensive industry. This recorded a 22.5 per cent fall in its wage bill in the June 2020 quarter. Automobile ancillaries reported a 21 per cent decline in its wage bill and the automobiles' wage bill was down by 18.6 per cent. These, again, are labour intensive.

tors, the wage bill of the tourism industry was down 30 per cent, hotels and restaurants down by 20.5 per cent, road transport down by 27.6

per cent, education by 28 per cent. Wage bill of the real estate sector was down by 21 per cent. The wage bill of the telecom sector increased by 10.7 per cent.

These are large inter-industry variations. Although the net result shows up as a marginal increase in the wage bill, implying a very small loss of jobs, the data indicate big job losses in many industries in the first quarter of 2020-21. CPHS estimates show a loss of 17 million salaried jobs in the quarter. We also know that this got worse in July.
